Riffs Smokehouse Opens in Marshall Terrace

One of Marshall Terrace's newest businesses is Riffs Smokehouse which opened in May at 3134 California St. NE.

Brothers-in-law Steve Hoppe and Kevin McElvain founded Riff's with a goal to make high-quality and healthy meats that are quick to prepare.

Music is important to the Riffs image: their name is derived from a guitar term, their logo is in the shape of a guitar pick, and their sauces are named "Sweet Child O' Mine" and "Voodoo Child", a nod to Guns N' Roses and Jimi Hendrix respectively.

"Riff's is all about having fun, eating good barbecue, hanging with friends, and listening to music," said Hoppe.

Customers can try the food and lunch in their sample room, or purchase packages to take home. For more info, visit www.riffssmokehouse.com.

Traffic Sign Replacement Program

Traffic signs are such an everyday part of city living that we often take them for granted. . . until we can't see them.

Minneapolis' Public Works Department maintains approximately 100,000 street signs, ranging from speed limit signs to street name signs. In 2014 they launched an eight-year program to replace all City roadway signs. This replacement program ensures that our street signs are readable and have improved reflectivity. The program is funded through the City's Capital Improvement Program (CIP).

The program was kicked off in Ward One (the ward in which Marshall Terrace lies) last year and, to date, 85% of Northeast Minneapolis' signs have been replaced. Once that area is complete, the program will move on to replacing signs in other parts of the City.
